Ecology and recycling

Tramontina cares about everything it does, including the environment. Production sustainable practices have been implemented and make the most of the raw material used. Rainwater, harvested through systems of gutters and lagoons, is reused throughout the factory.

Food safety

Tramontina porcelains have 100% hygienic surfaces thanks to the firing high temperature and a glazed layer on each product.

A more than special tribute: a necessary one.

Embracing plurality is part of our DNA. And, although social impositions try limiting the freedom of women, they continue to overcome stereotypes and prejudices of the past by striding every single day unique journeys that can revolutionize the world.

Taking that into consideration, Tramontina decided to make a tribute to all women and their contributions by bringing well-known names that echo from every corner. To start off on the right foot, we could not forget to praise two names that were very important in Tramontina's story. So, the Tramontina Porcelain decorated line becomes even more special.

Elisa Tramontina and Anna Scomazzon

Tramontina has been part of people's lives for over a century. And if the brand remains relevant, inspiring its consumers worldwide to doing things well until today, it is because 112 years ago, when it was founded, it had a solid base, including its founder Valentin Tramontina, and all other people involved in building the century-old brand, among which were Anna Scomazzon and Elisa De Cecco Tramontina.

Innovators and ahead of their time, Anna and Elisa were essential for consolidating the brand that we know nowadays and had significant impacts for building a Tramontina that knows people's worth. Elisa had to deal very early on with the loss of her husband Valentin, and had to reconcile the care of her kids with the continuation of the business, leading employees, keeping production, and ensuring sales. Her courage and resilience were fundamental for Tramontina to continue on the right track and proceed at greater and greater strides in an environment full of uncertainties.

Anna had a lot in common with Elisa. Also from Italian origins, she cultivated the same traditions and likes for culture and faith. They actually met at the Parish Church, in Carlos Barbosa/RS, becoming close to each other and coming to the conclusion that they were stronger together. United by the same purpose, they prepared their sons Ivo Tramontina and Ruy Scomazzon, through education and work, to become Tramontina leaders, proceeding with the partnership that they had started.

The energy that drove Anna and Elisa served as inspiration for Tramontina to keep the tenderness, strength, resistance, and sophistication in each and every one of its products, even in the most recent releases. Ensuring excellence and knowing people's worth, a tradition that started with the main characters of this story in the beginning of the 20th century.

More than 100 years have gone by but the gratitude for everything that Anna Scomazzon and Elisa Tramontina built is still alive in the brand!
